31 Weeks

It has been an honor to witness the Cardano NFT community grow since its inception back in March. In the past 31 weeks, I have made many friends, met tons of talented artists and developers and have been fortunate enough to work on some very exciting projects. These NFTs that I've picked up along the way will always have a sentimental value because they represent these people, and the experiences we've shared thus far in this beautiful community.

The collection has grown organically and there are many types of projects here, from limited artworks to NFTs that were created for their utility purposes. These pieces, and the many others that I was unfortunately unable to include are our foundation. Everything this community has built, experienced and discovered will go on to further the development of this incredible technology. While I believe the definition of an NFT will gradually change overtime, the history is forever.

The purpose of this book is to document a sample of this history. Not just the media, but some of the stories associated with them, at least from my perspective and the perspective of those who were able to contribute.

NFTs are forever, they will be around long after we are gone. However, our stories die with us, unless we make a concerted effort to preserve them.

A Couple Disclaimers:

This collection is not meant to be a catalog of the CNFT community. Rather, it is meant to serve as a large sample. There are many artists, projects and collections I would have loved to include, but every project needs its constraints, and this one is limited to the NFTs I've been able to collect over these past 7 months.

This book is not in chronological order.

I have reached out to all the artists/projects in this book and was given permission to include them.

All of the NFTs in this book are from artists & projects that I see as trusted and dedicated members of the community. This obviously does not mean that any missing projects are untrusted. Like I said, this is only a sample of the space.

This also does not mean you should blindly trust any of the projects included here. With everything in the Crypto space, we are all responsible for doing our own research before parting ways with our magical Internet tokens and/or fiat.

This book is also in no way investment advice. These are hardly even an investment to me. I purchased these NFTs because I enjoy the artwork, the projects, the artists, etc., and they all have an immense sentimental value to me. I think everyone should have the same approach when purchasing NFTs regardless of whether you are here to invest or here for the art.

Notes:

This NFT was the third (of 4) CardanoBits test mints. It was given to me from the artist/ developer behind the CardanoBits project. This image-less NFT is my favorite piece in the collection because it reminds me of how this journey began. CBits and I met in early March on Reddit and instantly became good friends. Meeting each other, and being able to connect with someone with similar interests & goals gave us the confidence and drive we needed to enter the space as early as we did.

It's unreal to think back to the day this was created. I'll never forget opening the message from CBits saying he minted his first NFTs. It was so different back then, minting on Cardano seemed like witchcraft to most people, so it was incredibly exciting to hear that these were minted.

About 5 months later in August, CBits asked me for my address. He said "I don't know if that has any value... But for me, it's hiper special" and he sent me this token and 20,000,000 PeluCoins (the first fungible tokens he minted). This NFT is the most meaningful piece in my collection because it is where this all began! I am so grateful for the friendship that came as a result of that time, and all the friendships that it has resulted in since.

CBits also owns one of my earliest and rarest pieces. I gifted him one of the original R.O.D.R.160 animations, 109 Animation 1/2, now we both have a piece of each others CNFT history :)

This CardanoBit was also given to me as a gift from CBits. He sent this little lady to me a about a week after the rest of the NFTs went out. CardanoBits are easily the most sentimental NFTs in my collections because I don't think I would be here if I hadn't become friends with the creator of this project. I'm forever grateful for this friendship.

Notes:
This CardanoBit was my first ever NFT. I purchased it during the CardanoBits Google Drive Drop on Easter Sunday, one of the most exciting and chaotic drops in CNFT history. The drop info was given out through a series of updating Google Drive sheets and sold out within 50 minutes. Due to the high demand and a slight issue with distribution, the minting process did not work as intended and it took about a week for the NFTs to be sent. The slightly chaotic nature of the drop led it to be one of the most memorable releases of the first couple months, it was CNFT history as far as I'm concerned.

This was the commemorative "poster" NFT given to all the artists and projects who participated in the CollaBits event. I was lucky enough to design these and the Commemorative Cards from the event. This poster contains the name of all the projects in the event and flashes through the 100 CardanoBits used. Only 60 of these were minted, 1 for each of the 52 projects, 1 for CardanoBits and the remaining 5 went to members of the CNFT.io team for helping with the auctions.

Notes:
Trevor and Alyssa from Never Engine, a married couple from New Orleans, are one of the most prominent members of the Cardano NFT community. They've been around since the beginning and are known for their surrealist art styled NFT collections as well as the multiple NFT Update shows that they're the host of.

I'm very grateful to have met them so early in the space during the CollaBits event, they have become some of my closest friends in the community.
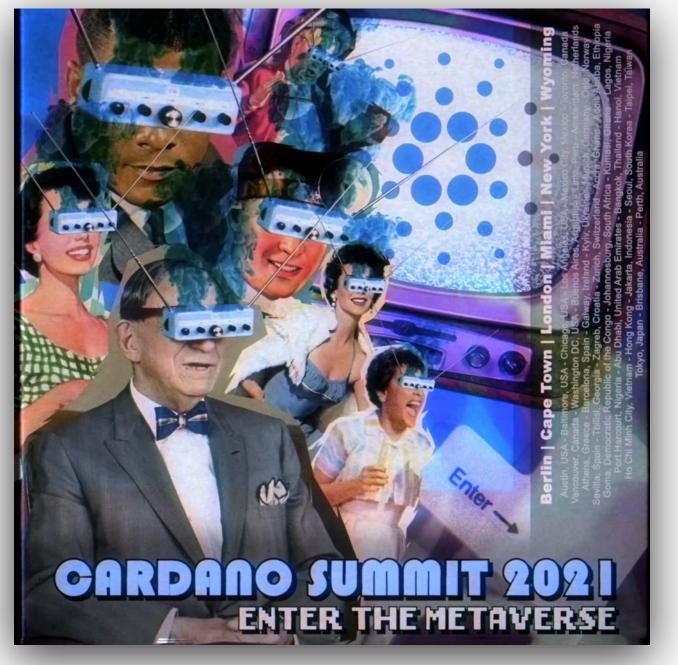

This is definitely an NFT you need to check out on Pool.pm (click the image or scan the QR code). It's one of my favorite Never Engine NFTs. There were only 50 of these minted and they've been slowly releasing them through fun giveaways and community contests.

Description: Say YES to the universe – with love, Alyssa and Trevor
Publisher: neverengine.net

Notes:
This NFT is from Never Engines Mythos Collection. It was their first major series on Cardano. The artwork was originally minted as Ethereum NFTs but they were burned during their Burn Day Event and re-released on Cardano. It was one of the earliest collections in the space to pay homage to the historical figures that are referenced throughout the Cardano ecosystem.

unsigned_algorithms is a collection of mathematical and rule based NFTs, and has been one of the most well known collections in the community. I met Alexander, the artist behind unsigned_algorithms months before he dropped his collection when we were both council members on the Artano platform. We bonded over our Architecture background. I don't think he expected this collection to get as much attention as it received, but it makes a lot of sense that it did. It was a first of its kind on Cardano, and while these aren't technically fully-on-chain, collectively they contain all the data necessary to recreate these all 31,119 unsigs, all on chain.

Refresh is an NFT project created by @_ThisCr8zyLife_ on Twitter. This is the only CNFT collection that I know of where the image is different every time you view it (every time you refresh the NFT). This image and the six on the following page are all different versions of this one NFT. Similar to the unsigs project, these images are also based off a set of rules, showcased in the meta-data, but instead of using that data to create a single image, it uses it to create a seemingly infinite amount of variations.

Artist: ShapesAda

Notes:

ShapesADA is a collection of 50,000 NFTs of randomly generated, colored and positioned shapes (rectangles, squares and ellipses). Everything about these pieces is random. This makes it a really unique project because its completely on us, the collectors/ audience to determine what is visually valuable, unlike most other projects that have a predetermined rarity table.

Notes:

Another one of my CNFT flexes is that (I think) I know who the creator of this project is, but I will admit its purely speculation. Very little is known about the artist behind this project. I have reasons to believe that it was created by an already established artist in the community, but that is all I will ever share on the matter.

An anonymous artist works well with this project since ultimately these pieces are more about the concept than the artwork.

AI Technology: VQGAN+CLIP

Notes:
This project is slightly similar to ShapesADA. The 10,000 NFTs in this collection were all created at random by AI. The first human interaction these have is when the buyer (or someone on pool.pm) first views it. We (as a community, but also personally) determine the artistic value of these. Its completely subjective which makes this collection very interesting and unique.

About: Acrylics on paper, 21x29.7cm
Collection: NFT+Physical Bundle Series
Url: backwardsgeometry.com

Notes:
This was my first physical NFT, and also my first Backwards Geometry piece. At the time of this auction, I was looking for one of Michaels solo pieces in the aftermarket. This auction was posted a few days later and I absolutely loved the piece so I knew it was meant to be. It now hangs in a fittingly bad ass all glass frame in my room.

Michael and I have become good friends, he is one of my favorite people to talk with, I think because we share a lot of the same view on art and creation. He has been around since the space began and has consistently released beautiful works into the community, not only paintings like these, but 3D digital sculptures as well.

-withspaces

Having physical pieces of my work traveling across continents and seas was nothing but a dream until not a while ago. This piece is the first one that made this come true! It marks an initial run of a handful of other paintings that found their way to North America, Europe and Asia.

-Michael (Backwards Geometry)

Notes:
A lot of the times when I'm introducing people to Michaels work, they say that they've never seen anything like it before.

Collection: Collection 4
Website: backwardsgeometry.com

Notes:
Michael (Backwards) works a lot with textures to convey emotions and ideas. He is constantly experimenting with new ways to produce these beautiful textures and layers. He seems to find a new system each series. The style of the paintings is usually consistent with this abstract imagery, but the means of which they are created seems to constantly evolve.

This piece was perfect for that full page spread, at first glance, it doesn't seem like there is much going on in this piece, but as you dig deeper into it, you can begin to see how intricate the layering is.

-withspaces

This style of painting is something that took me so long to pull off. I just love the look of something like an old wall that hasn't been well maintained and has seen a lot. To me this sort of painting has a lot to do with the passage of time and how it affects everything, whether we like it or not.

-Michael (Backwards Geometry)

Notes:
Michael has put out a number of these collage style pieces. I'm very happy to have finally pulled one in his most recent release.

Her and a "secret committee" have been giving out special Crypto Mayor tokens to people in the community after certain events. Its just one of the many incredible things Jenny has been doing for the community! She has awarded many other Crypto Mayor tokens since.

Crypto Mayor is one of the oldest projects on Cardano. There is a token for every city in the world, and they are sold as first come, first serve on their website. The holder of the tokens are refered to as the official Crypto Mayors of that city or town.

3DMintLab is a very talented 3D artist, as well as an NFT publisher in the community. They are another artist who has been around from the start, releasing multiple limited collections, collaborations, participated in Community events like CollaBits and working with Fahadouken to release his "100" collection.

One of the things I love about this artist, besides the incredible work, is that I've had some awesome conversations with them.

This piece was a collaboration between them and SwankPie. Only 90 of these were minted.

Davids artwork typically induces a sense of tranquility and relaxation in a way that is recognizable and a little nostalgic. Definitely an artist and a project to follow closely.

This drop demonstrated how incredible the CNFT community can be. When this collection went live, the system was sending the ADA back to the buyers along with the NFT. The price per NFT was 50 ADA, and about 60 transactions went through before it was fixed. They set up a payment system so people could return the ADA and amazingly almost all the ADA was sent back to the team before the end of the night. No one HAD to send the ADA back, there was no way of enforcing it. They did it because it was the right thing to do. It was such a beautiful moment for our community!

Number: 35 of 35.

Notes:
My portfolios were the first physical NFTs I've released. I had 35 of them printed a year before I got into the CNFT space to bring to job interviews, but because of Corona, only 2 were given out that way. 18 others were given out to close friends and family throughout the year. Once I got into the space, this was the main body of work I had to show off and I eventually released the remaining 15 books as physical NFTs through auctions. Each of the 15 portfolios were shipped with a secret word that when together unlocked a Yoroi wallet containing 15 secret pieces titled Time Will Tell.

I've said this a bunch already, and I will probably say it a bunch more, but this artist is truly one of my favorites. Anton is known for his clever animations and comic strips. His work has been floating around the internet since before any of us probably ever heard of an NFT. This piece was part of his Time To Scale collection. The collection consists of 25 different designs with multiple mints of each.

I love the rain and this is one of the few versions in this collection where the animation aligns with the context of the piece, it's one of my favorites in my collection.

Edition: 9/24

Notes:

This version of the piece was the default design. The mint count for this version was a bit higher than the others, 24 vs 19 for the rest. I personally think this rarity distribution is one of the best ways to distribute limited works. Rather than rarity, making the drop a bit of a gamble, all the designs have a very similar (or the same) mint count making it more about the artwork than a gamble. If people choose to buy one, they are buying one because they enjoy the art, rather than trying specifically for a "rare" piece. This drop is the perfect example of that. 24 of the defaults and 19 for the 24 other designs in the series.

Notes:

Danotype (also designed by Jacob Deakin) is the first typeface released as a Cardano NFT. It was part of a project he was working on for a class where he experimented with distributing digital tools, like a typeface as NFTs.

It's a really interesting concept. Blockchain design tools would make it easier track ownership of the legal rights to use digital tools, assets, plug-ins, etc.

Typography is the unsung hero of our lives, we interact with it 1000's of times a day without even noticing.

I want to use blockchain technology to expand on the current digital systems in type.
By building on top of blockchain technology I want to create an easier user experience for utilising type in a digital space. As well as this through the Non Fungible nature of blockchain tech make it easier and more efficient for monetising type for both the creator and end user

Notes:
Cardano Numbers started off as a joke Tweet that snowballed. The project was a collection of 10,000 arithmetically generated NFTs (10,000 numbers). We used J.D.s Danotype as the font, Adam Dean figured out a way to embed the SVGs so they would be completely on chain and exactly one week after the original Tweet, we launched the collection. We released them for free (it only cost the transaction fees, about 0.5 ADA) and the collection sold out in 3 hours and 40 minutes.
I also need to immortalize this Tweet.

Spacebudz were the first 10k collection on Cardano. It was created by Alessandro, operator of Berry Pool and creator of Nami Wallet and Zieg, an OG (2017) NFT-enthusiast. Even though it was the earliest drop on Cardano, it is known for having one of the smoothest and exciting releases on the platform.

In his cNFTcon interview, Alessandro shared a bit of the story of how these came to be. Zieg originally approached Alessandro to release a collection on Ethereum, but Alessandro pushed to have the collection released on Cardano. The 'test' NFTs he created to prove the concept was the "Berry" series, some of the first and most iconic NFTs on the platform.

Notes:
This collection is similar to the Clay Nation collection. Yummi Universe, like Clay Mates usually only releases limited runs of NFTs, but recently released a 10k collection of Narus. They are definitely one of the biggest and most recognizable collections in the space. At the time of writing this, I'd say almost 20% of Cardano Twitter profile pictures are NFTs from this collection.

Sushy Bytes is a collection of 10k cute little sushi characters with a bit of utility. Each nft is playable in a few online mini-games. They were one of the first projects to implement a game with their NFTs on the Cardano blockchain.
-withspaces

These bytes have brought the sushi team so much joy over the past few months. Like a flashback to Saturday morning cartoons or an afternoon spent exploring Viridian City. There's something simple and nostalgic about our collection. If our retro games are able to transport you to your childhood, even just for 15 minutes, and you can forget about your responsibilities and worries, then that's a good thing. We love that we can innovate and inspire through that lens.

Notes:
The story of how I got these two (a complete solar system) is pretty insane. When this sale was still live, I bought one and was lucky enough to get a "rare", which are extremely limited in this collection. Less than half the collection had sold at the time and it was already on sale for about a month. The next day I was negotiating a deal for a gold aeoniumsky tree. I showed the seller some NFTs I was willing to trade for it, one of which was the rare Stellar. Negotiations went on for a couple days but as the time went on, Stellars began to quickly sell out all of a sudden. This sweetened the deal and we eventually made the trade. Before the collection completely sold out (which was later that day) I picked up a couple more since I traded the rare, this planet was one of them. I was looking to get the star because its from the Water Carrier constellation (my sign) so looked up the wallet it was in thinking that there was an almost zero percent chance I'd recognize the wallet. Well... it turned out to be aeoniumsky's wallet (which i recognized) and we were able to make a trade. It came full circle. So not only was I able to complete this Water Carrier constellation, but the star was discovered by the one and only aeoniumsky.

Notes:
DEADPXLZ were the first interactive NFTs on Cardano. They were created by an innovative developer named Adrian. The 3 PXLz drops were each more interesting than the previous as Adrian implemented a unique buying system where they were sold one at a time, visible to everyone, so the users had a bit of control over what PXL they received. This created lots of fun and exciting moments, as people all aped in all at once trying to get a specific PXL. This concept evolved slightly each drop and by the final one Adrian set up 3 different queues all live at the same time.

Ada Dolls is another OG project that has been here from the start. It is a collection of unique 3D dolls. The first collection was all male figures, the next upcoming drop will be females.

Mike and I first connected over our experience of working as a receipt checker at a warehouse retail store, the person who punches holes in the receipts at the door. He worked at a Cosco in the UK and I worked at a BJs Wholesale Club here in the States. Receipt checking is the worst job in retail.

Cardano Kidz was the first Cardano NFT project I ever heard about. They were advertising their collection back in the beginning of 2021, a few months before the CNFT community really took shape. Being so early, their initial drop was a presale, and the NFTs weren't delivered until a couple months later. Their test NFTs were some of the earliest on Cardano.

ADA Miners is an innovative project that aims to integrate DeFi styled systems into their collection. Most, if not all of the NFTs in this project are created to interact with the rest of the project in different ways to maximize utility. One example of this is a gold ADA Miners coin which grants double the amount of gold able to mine from the mines. They have also experimented with creative ways add specific purchasing ability by sending different amounts of ADA during a drop for different outcomes.

Artist: SmittyStudio
Notes:
This piece was from Smitty's second collection. Like the previous piece, this also came from one of his studio projects. The space depicted in this piece was an exhibition he designed to visualize the amount of drinking water pulled from a reservoir, broken-up into the different counties. Like the previous piece, 10 were minted, but the special edition for this piece was auctioned off. The special edition of this piece is one of my favorite pieces minted on Cardano.

Notes:
These two pieces were from Smitty's third drop. This drop was a bit different than the last two. There were six different versions of this piece and 5 mints of each (30 total). The interesting thing about these is how they were created. They are a mix of 3D modeling/rendering and 2D digital painting. He switched back and forth between the two multiple times to create this, he explains it in detail in this video.

This was the first normal Touréguide drop (a regular ol', "send n ADA to x address"). Before this, all of our drops were mostly giveaways, a couple manual Discord drops and auctions.

This collection actually sold out twice, both times in under 5 minutes. The first time we did it there was an issue with the minting process and everyone got refunded. We ran it again 30 minutes later.

Info: Made at 2015 by Edgar Paz
Info2: Used Oil Paint in a 18 x 24 inch Canvas

Notes:
I'm pretty sure this was the third NFT I ever bought, after my two CardanoBits. It was a painting by the father of an early member in the community, from the Philippines. It was really cool because at the time, drops weren't a daily thing like they are today finding a trusted person, selling beautiful and genuine art was really exciting to see. The other reason was that, here I was, sitting in my bedroom, on my computer and I was able to easily purchase an art piece, painted by a persons father in the Philippines, send them money and everything, all within a minute or two. This transaction is what really made that concept sink in for me.

SKIN.

Notes:
These pieces were painted by the artist SKIN from the MADinArt team. The team has been doing incredible work bringing artists into the CNFT space. They were some of the earliest artists in the space as you can tell by the mint date of the Freddie piece, minted before even the CardanoBits project. It was started by SKIN and JP after they bumped into each other in a supermarket, which ultimately put them on the path to creating MADinArt. They have since added 8 other artists to the group, each with a unique style, and most working in physical mediums like paintings.

Honestly... SKIN is probably the coolest dude in the CNFT community. It's obvious as soon as you meet him or see him in a YouTube video. He is such a nice and positive person, and he is so incredibly passionate about his work. You can hear it when he talks, and you can see it in his pieces. He has a special way of carrying the energy of the artists into his work. This painting of Freddie Mercury is one of my favorite examples. His paintings are often much larger than human scale, this piece for example is about 6' x 4'.

Notes:

Dilliat is a young and rising artist in the CNFT community. He first grabbed the attention of Artano and those of us on the council by marketing himself alongside the platform. We would sometimes look through artists portfolios during council meetings to determine the kind of information we would need from the artists applying to the platform. Dillons artwork always stirred up the most discussion. I was already really into his work but the discussions made me pull the trigger. I messaged him and ended up buying this piece off him. The title of it is "Riches" which is pretty cool since it was his first NFT sale. I'm honored to be holding it! He's a really cool dude and I see him sticking around for a while!

This piece is by one of my absolute favorite artists in the community. I never expected to own one of his pieces, never mind two of them. These pieces all add to the X.T.E.R.R.A. Ordinaire storyline.

The X.T.E.R.R.A. Ordinaire story consists of tribal looking figures, living in a seemingly post apocalyptic world. The pieces released so far from this series have had many types or creatures as subjects, so far it has primarily been "Hunters" and "Prey" and a hand full of other characters like the two in these two Bosmaus pieces. I am honored to hold these, they are priceless.

I have an addiction to aeoniumsky, and I think this NFT is partly responsible. As you can tell from this book, I rarely ape into one specific project. There are just too many artists in the space that I enjoy. Aeoniumsky is the exception, I can't stay away from this mysterious & talented artist!

I was already collecting aeon before I got this piece, I traded it for the Gold Egg I pulled in the Block 3 drop. It was my first egg and I was shocked this NFT was still up in the vault since this was #3 of the first 4 NFTs they ever minted. I am still amazed that I'm able to hold this piece. It was my first rare aeon piece, and as you are about to see, it started a bit of an addiction.

Notes:
Aeoniumsky eggs burn a hole in my wallet. The few that I was lucky enough to get never lasted more than a couple weeks. I traded Egg #22 for this piece, #11/12 from aeons second oldest collection. It was very difficult to make this trade though. 22 is aeons favorite number, so if there was any egg that was going to last in my wallet it would have been that one. But I didn't want to pass up the chance to get a complete "aeoniumsky N000" set.

The person I traded the egg to immediately traded it for a marble in the vault, so we both took home a win that day!

Asset ID: asset1dv0t67nhgy4x6ppx0f0exndma5mdjkr9xa5t8w
Date Minted: 2021-07-12 at 21:59:06 UTC

Collection: aeoniumsky - Tree
Number: 2 of 3
Rarity: Collectors
Url: aeoniumsky.io

Notes:

This is one of the three remaining Golden Trees. The story of this trade is pretty wild, I shared it in the Stellar Hood section of the book.

The way the golden trees worked, is that 5 golden seeds were released during the drop, each seed evolved the same up to evolution 4, then 3 of the trees evolved into a final golden tree, and the other 2 evolved into eggs, replacing the trees, leaving only 3 Golden Trees.

Asset ID: asset10nmp2dmm2mrlshe4lgq50xc359rvaqgqu0442g
Date Minted: 2021-08-01 at 22:04:11 UTC

Color: Plasma Fields
Number: 5 of 7

Notes:
These NFTs were part of aeons Lamp collection. There were 7 different types of lamps, 5 common versions with multiple mints and multiple versions with different rarity. The other two lamps were 1/1s. One of them was revealed before the drop, the other wasn't revealed until it was minted.

Color: Clear
Number: 1 of 1

Notes:
This was probably my luckiest CNFT pull yet, by far! This is the mystery 1/1 Lamp from the collection. Recently aeon messaged me saying they'd like to send me a special digital frame of this Lamp, I posted a video of it to Twitter. This is definitely one of my favorite NFTs in my collection.

Collaboration: Cardano Robin
Number: 13 of 35
Rarity: Uncommon
Website: aeoniumsky.io

Notes:
This piece was a collaboration between aeon and Cardano Robin. They were secretly dropped during the Block 5 release. There was a QR Code hidden in the block that brought you to a page where these were being dropped. There were 3 different versions, 2 Uncommons and 1 Gold.

Number: 1 of 2
Rarity: Uncommon
Website: aeoniumsky.io

Notes:
This was another vault item I traded a Gold Egg for. It reminded me of a project I did in an architecture studio class.

This piece is very beautiful and relaxing, I love the sentence written at the bottom of the piece, "prosper by the healing springs".

Notes:
This is Block 1 from aeons Block series. Each NFT in this series connects to each other, three per row, going right to left. This is the rarest block in the series, being out of 100. This NFT was actually a gift from ReiKo, and my first aeon NFT after aeoniumsky N2 T08.

This drop was a very exciting one. It happened during the New York Cardano Summit and we had 7 or 8 of us all in the corner of the room trying to get this NFT. None of us were able to get our transactions out in time, but it was one of the best experiences none the less! I will never forget that day.
